

REALITALIA NEW LAUNCH

Realitalia has launched another beautifully restored historical development in Abruzzo, Italy.

Following on from the success of the restoration project in Colletta di Castelbianco, featured in last months overseas supplement, Realitalia launched the project renovating ancient homes in the historic centre of Santo Stefano di Sessanio in the heart of Abruzzo, a region rich in cultural traditions.

In addition, Realitalia, together with Sextantio, has created a unique programme designed to take the pressure out of purchasing and maintaining homes in the Italian countryside combining the service provided for by the 'Albergo Diffuso' with these private homes.

'The true value of this project is the profound desire to make something special in the design and restoration of this community and it's homes to a standard that is exceptional to the local market,' says Luca Catalano, director of Realitalia.

For this project the company teamed up with Sextantio, the restoration company that created the extraordinary 'Albergo Diffuso'. Diffuso is Italian and means 'spread'; in this instance Albergo Diffuso is the hotel which is spread around the historical centre thereby one finds the reception in one ancient building, the restaurant in another, the wine bar elsewhere and the rooms located into different historical buildings in the village. This enables the area to keep its charming antiquity.

The private homes at Santo Stefano di Sessanio will benefit from the professional management of the 'Albergo Diffuso', including an online rental service (for those who want to rent their homes), and other services specifically created to give homeowners an opportunity to have time to relax in their Italian home.
